

 ERIC B. LARSON

Eric B. Larson is the founder, president and chief executive officer of the Larson Realty Group. Larson Realty Group is a privately owned, Bloomfield Hills, Michigan based company engaged in real estate investment, development, asset management and leasing.

Mr. Larson is also the founder and president of Community Investment Support Fund, a nonprofit organization recently established to promote economic development and facilitate investment of capital in support of community revitalization and the nonprofit sector.

Prior to establishing the Group, Mr. Larson was a partner and senior vice president with Bruce S. Brickman & Associates, Inc. a New York based real estate company. Mr. Larson was responsible for the acquisition and asset management of the company's portfolio, coordinated the firm's repositioning of 150 West Jefferson in Detroit and Northlake Office Park in Atlanta and was instrumental in the formation of a subsidiary management company.

From 1996 to 1999, Mr. Larson was a vice president/project officer at Hines Interests Limited Partnership ("Hines"), a privately owned full service international real estate company. Mr. Larson managed the 140 plus-person Hines Detroit office. He established, and was responsible for, the firm's advisory relationship with General Motors Corporation. He coordinated General Motors' purchase of the 5.5 million-square foot Renaissance Center and the 1 million-square foot Millender Center in downtown Detroit. Mr. Larson also negotiated and directed the Hines property and development management services for the more than $2 billion redevelopment of these properties and the surrounding 24 acres of waterfront land. He provided advisory services to the Detroit Medical Center in conjunction with the planning and consolidation of its new corporate headquarters. During the same period he was also responsible for the coordination of acquisition, management, leasing and development activities throughout Michigan, Indiana and Canada for Hines.

From 1989 to 1996, Mr. Larson was a project manager for the design, development, financing, management and leasing of the 1.6 million square foot Comerica Tower (formerly One Detroit Center) in Detroit, Michigan.

From 1986 to 1989, Mr. Larson served as a project manager, in the Hines Chicago office and was involved in the management, leasing and tenant construction of the 1.5 million-square foot Three First National Plaza in Chicago.
